Sir,

With reference to the steamer "ORMLEY", now under survey here for damage, we beg to acquaint you that a portion of the riveting of the engine seating has been found started.

It is proposed to make good as much as possible of the riveting without removing the engines and to compensate for the remainder by fitting additional brackets.

These repairs are now about to be commenced and this information is forwarded in the event of it being considered desirable that a Surveyor from the London Office should examine the seating.

We are, Sir,

Your obedient servants,
