REC^d 3 FEB 1913ANS^d

The Secretary,

Lloyd's Register.

Sir,

S.S. "CORNWALL", No. 1705 R.B.

In accordance with the instructions contained in your telegram received yesterday afternoon I immediately proceeded to Barry and made a careful examination of the hole in the sole piece where the stud bolt had been removed and found on each side of the hole about $\frac{1}{2}$ " below the top surface a small cavity in a fore and aft direction about $\frac{5}{8}$ " deep just large enough to admit the tip of my finger. This cavity being of a slight nature in my opinion in no way affects the recommendations previously made.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

The Secretary,
Lloyd's Register,

Sir,

B.S. "CORNWALL", No. 1102 S.S.

In accordance with the instructions contained in your telegram received yesterday afternoon I immediately proceeded to carry out a careful examination of the hole in the sole plate where the stud bolt had been removed and found on each side of the hole about 1/2" below the top surface a small cavity in a row and all direction about 3/8" deep just large enough to admit the tip of my finger. This cavity being of a slight nature in my opinion in no way affects the recomposition previously made.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

Delivered to the Chief Ship Surveyor.
